Social Ministry and Social Justice

The following is adapted from a June 7 article by Micayla Bitz at www.lssnd.org and is part of an important discussion today.

- Pastor Karl

"Truly I tell you, whatever you did for one of the least of these brothers and sisters of mine, you did for me." ~Matthew 25:40

It's been the driving question for Christians for centuries: What would Jesus do? The question only continues to grow more complex as we navigate today's tense political climate alongside the increasing needs of our community. What would Jesus do to help "the least of these?" What is the role of social ministry and social justice in fulfilling the call to love our neighbor?

In order to fully understand these terms and how they are connected, it is helpful first to define them. Social justice is generally understood to mean working through societal or political systems to achieve equality, fairness and dignity for all human beings. Social ministry, on the other hand, describes providing direct service to people and communities in need. Essentially, the terms are different means to the same end – serving "the least of these" described in Matthew 25. While social ministry brings tangible assistance to those in crisis, social justice works to rewrite the societal structure that created the crisis in the first place. Social ministry addresses the symptoms, while social justice attempts to remedy the cause.

Giving meals to the homeless is social ministry – addressing an immediate need by feeding the hungry. Supporting affordable housing projects or behavioral health programs to keep people off the streets in the first place are examples of social justice.

For too long, people have looked at each term without the other. It is time that we stop looking at these two terms as an either or situation. We need both social ministry and social justice work, to truly serve as we are called.

This is the model Jesus followed during his time on Earth. Feeding the hungry and healing the sick are examples of social ministry, but Jesus also practiced social justice by fighting against the political structures that created inequality during his time. In Matthew 21, Jesus protested the religious establishment's abuse of the poor. By driving out the temple merchants and overturning their tables, Jesus combined his social ministry work for the poor with social justice work. When merchants exploited poor people coming to the temple worship, Jesus took direct action to challenge the corrupt practices in the church.

So, what would Jesus do? We already know the answer. He lived a life dedicated to both social ministry and social justice. Jesus addressed people's immediate needs while also remedying broken societal and political structures.

In the US, politics and religion have forever been a taboo mix, but life is never that black and white. This is not a partisan effort. In such politically polarized times, it is imperative to avoid getting caught up in the fight as we advocate for structural change. These issues are not isolated to one political party and meaningful change cannot happen without the cooperation of everyone.

We are called to care for the "least of these" (Matthew 25:40), to love our neighbors as ourselves (Mark 12:31) and to set free the oppressed (Luke 4:18). We are called to act justly, to love mercy and to walk humbly (Micah 6:8). God be with us.

First Communion

Covid-19 has affected many things, including Holy Communion class for 4th graders in the spring. We celebrated a little late, with these students who participated in Holy Communion instruction, Wednesday evening, June 24, and will be receiving their first communion and big-kid Bibles on August 2.

Anti-Racism

The Evangelical Lutheran Church in America (ELCA) has reaffirmed its commitment to combating racism and white supremacy. We condemn the prejudice which has led to the deaths of so many unarmed persons of color in our country. We grieve with, pray for and stand in solidarity with the families and friends of all whose loved ones have been and continue to be victims of injustices and violence.

The ELCA’s social policy resolution, “Condemnation of White Supremacy and Racist Rhetoric,” adopted by the 2019 ELCA Churchwide Assembly, states: “As persons called to love one another as God has loved us, we therefore proclaim our commitment to speak with one voice against racism and white supremacy. We stand with those who are targets of racist ideologies and actions.” As church, together we work to condemn white supremacy in all forms and recommit ourselves to confront and exorcize the sins of injustice, racism and white supremacy in church and society and within ourselves as individuals and households.

As we worship in person during this time of Covid-19, we continue to balance the physical, spiritual and emotional health of those who choose to gather in-person. These steps are based on recommendations from the CDC, ND Public Health and ELCA synod and church wide resources. As you can see in the schedule above, we are resuming Holy Communion distribution during July, but otherwise still do not have food or beverage at church.
